

Indians Could Have Won With Today's Equipment

Bows and arrows, once the Indian's prime means of obtaining food and providing protection, is fast becoming a popular hobby and pastime for thousands of Torrance residents.

It's a sport for young and old of both sexes with many of its boosters starting at the age of seven. Special bows are made for youngsters. Once an archer always an archer in the philosophy of enthusiastic 82-year-old Jack Colburn of Inglewood who is not about to give up the sport.

Many teenagers are becoming interested after taking archery as a physical education course in high school. Often that's all it takes. One person to be interested and soon the entire family finds themselves aiming at targets.

SCORING is said to be the biggest satisfaction of using the bow and arrow although it is claimed about 75 per cent of the persons who use a bow go hunting with their equipment. Hunting regulations in California require a bow to shoot an arrow 135 yards and the arrow head must be able to pass through a 7/8 inch ring.

"If the Indians had the archery equipment that we have today there would be no white man now," says Dick Rynearson of Torrance whose grandfather, a Comanche Indian, first instructed him in use of the bow and arrow when he was 9 years old.

"My grandfather showed me how to use the bow and arrow and it just came naturally to me," Rynearson says. He is manager of Knight's Archery Supplies, 1620 Gramercy Ave., at the corner of Cravens and Gramercy.

Rynearson, along with the two owners of the store and one other person, have formed a four-man team called the Black Knights. If there is enough interest shown, the four plan on forming their own club.

Rynearson and the two store owners, Norman Christensen of Torrance and Jerry Johnson of Bellflower, along with the other team members are all members of the American Indoor Archery Assn. which qualifies them to shoot in leagues and competitive shooting.

Torrance's pro archery shop is the only one this side of Pasadena. There's another in Glendale, Rynearson said.

Bank Promotes Mrs. MacDonald

Mrs. Rosemarie MacDonald has been promoted to assistant cashier in the operations department of the Torrance branch of the Bank of America. She succeeds Charles H. Milner who has been assigned to the Redondo Beach branch.

Mrs. MacDonald and her husband are active in the Sobada Dance Club. They reside at 1005 Hickory Ave., and have two children.

Are you looking for a garden hobby. Try bonsai, or a variation of it by planting some of your favorite shrubs in small containers and keeping them in check by frequent pinching. Pyracantha, Japanese Maple, various pines, and other conifers make good subjects to start. Heavy wire and selective pruning will make them grow in the shape and direction you want them to.

PRESENTLY there are four archery clubs in the Southwest and Southbay areas with a total membership of approximately 300.

They are the South Bay Archery Club, which has its range near Crenshaw Boulevard and Pacific Coast Highway in Torrance; Redondo Bow Hunters, the San Pedro Archery Club and the North American Aviation Archery Club. Oldest of the four clubs is the South Bay organization which was established about 20 years ago.

ADVENT of the automatic indoor range is said to be one of the contributing factors in the gaining popularity of archery. Such ranges are quite well lit and a fun center for the entire family with plays rooms for children, snack bars and pro shops.

It is anticipated that a range will be built soon in Torrance. At present one of the nearest is at Imperial and Bellflower in Downey. There are also ranges in Garden Grove and Covina.

Average cost of equipment for a beginning archer is about $40. Many people interested in the sport use a bow costing $100 with serious shooters paying $150 for equipment.
